DETAILED ACTION

Information Disclosure Statement

1. The information disclosure statement filed 06/26/2002, paper #10 fails to comply with 37 CFR 1.98(a)(3) because it does not include a concise explanation of the relevance, as it is presently understood by the individual designated in 37 CFR 1.56(c) most knowledgeable about the content of the information, of each patent listed that is not in the English language. It has been placed in the application file, but the information referred to therein has not been considered.

In the IDS filed on 06/26/2002, the foreign patent documents are not considered since the applicant does not submit them in the English language.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 3663

3. Claims 1-7, 10, 12-14, and 16-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Brachert et al. (US 5832402) and in view of Mine et al. (US 6208927), and Hiwatashi (US 6094614).

Claims 1-7, 10, 12-14, and 16-19: Brachert et al. basically disclosed a vehicle control system and method for controlling vehicle, including anti-lock brake system, traction control system, and stability system, and a controller coupled to those systems (See Fig. 1, Fig. 2; Column 2, lines 1-67, columns 5 and 6, lines 1-67). Bracheret et al. did not disclose that the controller adapted to receive a vehicle position signal and said controller further adapted to receive a weather signal, wherein said weather signal effects determination of said characteristic. Mine et al. disclosed another vehicle control system and method for maneuvering a vehicle. Mine et al. overcome the deficiency of Brachert et al. by the teaching of GPS device for determining the position of the vehicle (See column 4, Lines 26-35). Hiwatashi disclosed a vehicle control system and method for controlling vehicle, including anti-lock brake system, traction control system, and stability system, and a controller coupled to those systems, including an air temperature sensor 34 for detecting outside air temperature. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to improve the system and method of Brachert et al. by teaching GPS receiver for accurately determining the current position of the vehicle compared with the position of the road curvature. And air temperature sensor provided for inputting the weather signal to the controller. As discussed above, the teachings of Mine et al. and Hiwatashi would be a substitution of missing features from Brachert et al. The advantage of the combination is to notify user that whether the vehicle is traveling on a recommended road and the current temperature from the outside.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 8, 9, 11, 15, 20, and 21 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Amendment

5. The applicant's amendment and arguments filed on 06/18/2002 have been fully considered.

The examiner has found that the U.S patent No.' 614 to Hiwatashi disclosed the weather signal and plurality other features recited by applicant. Therefore, the application would be obvious over Brachert et al., Mine et al., and Hiwatashi combination.
